Communications giant 'Project Telecom' prior its buyout in late 2003, sought the professional services of GNA Surveyors Ltd in the development of their new high specification and flexible workspace designed to utilize staff break-out areas, multi-media suites, IT servers and storage.

The project at the time of its design and construction incorporated advanced technology including site-wide secure wireless capability, a complex building management system, and an uninterruptible power supply designed to maintain the buildings services in event of a localised power failure.

Thanks to GNA's expert advice, accurate cost control and tendering, the project was completed in 2006, in time and within budget.
